Greenbelt CARES

Week Ending May 22

Teresa Smithson participated in the webinar “Making Virtual Psychotherapy a Relational Experience” conducted by Janina Fisher, Ph.D., an expert in the field of trauma recovery.

Darren Stephenson conducted the first session of “Parenting during Coronavirus,” an online parenting group. Topics discussed were Parental Stress, Coping Skills and Depression. Participants were given a host of community resources. The next session will be Wednesday, May 27.

Sharon Johnson participated in webinar trainings on the following topics:

- Loneliness & Aging: The Other Epidemic
- Care for the Caregiver during COVID-19 Crisis

Liz Park attended the webinars “How to Lead Through COVID-19 Crisis in a Resilience-oriented Trauma-informed Way,” and “Imagining Behavioral Health Delivery Post COVID-19.” Both webinars were sponsored by the National Council for Behavioral Health.

Danielle Rogal-Hudspeth and Teresa Smithson watched a screening of the documentary “The Kids We Lose.” Filmmaker Lisa Quijano Wolfinger highlights the research that has accumulated on behaviorally challenging children and the often counterproductive ways our educational system deals with them. The screening was provided by the advocacy organization Lives in the Balance.

Judye Hering has begun a virtual ESOL class. It can be seen on CARES virtual education site along with the GED Powerpoints. ESOL Lesson #1 is about Memorial Day.

Judye Hering listened to a presentation on how COVID-19 disrupts sleep. It provided strategies to relieve stress and get a more restful sleep.

On Monday, Glenda Willis held the first session of the nine week “Drama Club” Anger Management Classes online Via Zoom.
